

PUBLISHING RESOURCES

Information on how to develop your CV to get into publishing

INFORMATION

Register with Atwood Tate Publishing Recruitment

Using Social Media

Useful places to look for Work Experience in publishing

Skills to highlight on your CV

Need more information?
Get in touch:
info@atwoodtate.co.uk

Registering with Atwood Tate Publishing Recruitment

As a publishing recruitment agency we cover all levels of publishing from entry-level to senior. But entry-level positions are fairly rare.

We do take on entry-level candidates and when we get entry-level roles in, we'll contact you. You can register on our website: upload your CV & fill out your preferences as to what kind of roles you are looking for.

If, at first, we respond with a suggestion that you gain more experience you are still registered with us. It simply means that we probably can't help you at this time, but we might be able to in future if you gain experience.

Whilst we don't handle internships or work experience placements we do have a temp's desk, which is effectively paid work experience. We will refer you to the temp's team if we feel that you have transferable skills that they can use.

Using Social Media

We recommend that you familiarise yourself with social media, particularly Twitter, as this is a great platform for networking and learning more about publishing

There are a lot publishing campaigns run across Twitter & Instagram throughout the year including #WorkinPublishing week. Publishers also offer Q&A's & insight into the industry. You can ask questions, network & create a portfolio of interest in publishing to mention later at interviews.

A lot of publishers, literary agencies & recruitment companies publicise entry-level jobs on social media first!

We recommend that you also check out our Blog for regular updates about publishing. We write 2 blogs a week about numerous topics from writing Cover Letters to publishing events, tips for interviews & Giveaways!

Useful places to look for Work Experience in Publishing

Work Experience in publishing is advertised in many places. Here are some of the best places to find Work Experience in publishing:

- “ BookCareers.com
- The Bookseller
- Publishing Scotland
- Oxford Brookes
- Facebook - Publishing Work Experience Vacancies pages
- @PubInterns or www.pubinterns.wordpress.com
- @PublishingJobs
- The Society of Young Publishers or @SYP

The Society of Young Publishers is a subscription based society - £24 per year for students/unwaged or £30 for those in employment. Anyone with less than 10 years experience in publishing can join.

They have an exclusive jobs board, networking events, yearly conferences, access to courses at discount prices and more. It is well worth considering joining this society if you're serious about entering the publishing industry.

Skills to Highlight

- HTML or coding experience
- InDesign or Photoshop experience
- Languages
- Attending Events
- Publishing Courses
- Administration
- Blogging
- Social Media
- Temp experience
- Publishing Society memberships

